MEETING TO DISCUSS INNOVATIVE FINANCING FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

We would like to invite you to a focused, invite-only meeting on the 25th September in the Jesse Smith Noyes Foundation* Atrium boardroom to discuss specific ways to support an innovative network to identify synergies and gaps in the existing financing initiatives and architecture for development and the environment -- with an initial emphasis on Africa and the most marginalized regions in the global South.

The meeting aims to identify the individuals and philanthropic institutions who can support the development of an ambitious and inclusive multi-stakeholder program which will identify innovative solutions to rethink and deploy new financing strategies for sustainable development.

This program seeks to map existing financing initiatives and mechanisms, gather stakeholder priorities and perceptions, and engage the broadest range of expert and non-expert stakeholders in the sharing of solutions for financing sustainable development. These solutions will then be fed into the intergovernmental process on Sustainable Development Financing currently underway as a part of the United Nations' post-2015 development agenda.

Beyond the post-2015 agenda, we hope to catalyze a conversation to help shape a multi-year effort which will go beyond international agreements, connecting funders with practitioners and ideas to deliver meaningful and pioneering action on sustainable development.

We hope that you will be able to join us in developing and undertaking this exciting project as we believe that your involvement will be key to its success.
